NURSING HONOR SOCIETY

2nd International Conference
Genoa University Nursing Honor Society

Bridging the gap
the role of nursing leadership
in supporting excellence in fundamental care
and preventing missed care

GENOA, 10TH OCTOBER 2019

Nursing leadership means recognizing and respecting human dignity. It involves listening, inspiring, encouraging, paying attention and supporting a culture that values and rewards nursing. It means being nurses who constantly focused on the quality of care and patient safety.

Great nursing leaders, whether they are executives, ward managers, clinical nurses or educators, every day convey a common vision whereby the key for person centred care passes through the excellence of nursing practice.

Nursing leadership is promoted by work environments that promote self-fulfilment and the satisfaction of professionals' needs: professional autonomy, action competency, relationship and sense of belonging.

The financial crisis has put Italian Nursing under strong pressure, increased demotivation and nurses hardly recognize themselves as professionals obliged to cover demeaning roles.

The purpose of the 2nd International Conference of the Genoa University Honor Society is to engage the Italian nursing community in the international debate regarding the need to promote nursing leadership in all fields: clinical, educational, organizational and research, in order to encourage more awareness and rediscover the reasons for being proud of our nursing roots.
